place to see him to keep him from being hurt. But when he came to the door, he found it was to Abby's arrival, and from that time on an interrelation between the two began. Abby was a woman of great strength of mind and character, and a strong feeling for the welfare of others. She was a woman of great strength of mind and character, and a strong feeling for the welfare of others. "Please leave," replied the wife, rather calmly.

"You, you do know," replied Albert, "and what I wish to know is this: why have you not written to me?"

"I have," she told him. "I have known how if you think so. But I have only told the what a good a first-class letter was. But I have not written to you."

[Faint, illegible text from bleed-through]

...the ... of the ...

Time: 11:00 AM

There was no longer anything to be done but to wait. The morning of the 10th of June was a fine one, and the weather was very pleasant. The wind was from the north, and the sea was calm. The sun was shining brightly, and the sky was blue. The water was very clear, and the bottom was sandy. The fish were very numerous, and the birds were very noisy. The people were very happy, and the day was very pleasant.

The W. J. Wilson title is more noticeable than most of those that have appeared, and it is a pity that the book is not more widely known. The author's style is clear and concise, and the book is a good read.
